Empowering Through Professionalism to Safeguard Rights, Collaborating Diversely to Promote Inclusion

The protection of persons with disabilities' rights is a cornerstone of global human rights. As a special group, autistic individuals need precise safeguards and professional support for their right to health and development.

Since 2014, the Beijing Guangming Charity Foundation has focused on protecting autistic groups' rights. With the "Star Project" as its core, the foundation has developed an innovative rehabilitation model integrating "Cybradionet Brain Training + TCM Acupoint Intervention". It has provided capacity-building training for over 3,000 autistic individuals, special education teachers and volunteers, covering Beijing, Tianjin, Hebei, Shandong and other regions, and partnered with more than 10 rehabilitation institutions to build a standardized service system. We have compiled practical rehabilitation manuals, provided free public teaching aids, and pooled social efforts through public welfare runs and parent mutual assistance groups to form a solid rehabilitation support network.

Advancing the protection of persons with disabilities' rights requires joint efforts of the international community. The foundation is willing to share Chinese civil society's public welfare practices, and calls on all countries to strengthen cross-field and cross-regional cooperation, improve rehabilitation service systems and social security mechanisms for persons with disabilities, so that every person with a disability can equally enjoy development opportunities and a life of dignity, and jointly promote inclusive development of the global human rights cause.
